6. TYPICAL PRACTICAL TASKS (cases and tasks)

Case 1: a Russian ice cream “Chistaya Linia” company wants to introduce a new brand to the Brazil market. It is known that Brazil is gaining a positive attitude to Russian chocolate and sweets. “Chistaya Linia” ice cream also has one important competitive advantage in the foreign markets : it is considered environmentally friendly and practically healthy, which creates additional promotion opportunities in an era of increased attention to healthy lifestyles. The manufacturer assumes that this will help them in entering the market.

1. What international marketing strategies can potentially be applicable here, keeping in mind the “healthy” orientation of the brand?
2. What distribution patterns can be applicable at this section of Brazil FMCG market?
3. What conditions of the external economic environment should a company study in order to make a conclusion about the attractiveness of the Brazil market. Give some possible indicators.

Case 2. You have received a task to assess the market conditions and future potential (marketing conjuncture) for passenger cars in Bulgaria. For this:

- a) Give a detailed definition of what can be accounted as the market conditions
- b) What factors would you include in your assessment of the Bulgaria car market potential?
- c) What is the most widely used supply chain patterns in auto market? Are they applicable to a small country like Bulgaria?

Case 3. The Belgian Alpro firm introduces a new brand of alternative almond milk "Amilk" in CIS countries. The product is new on the market, and aims to meet the needs of middle class customers who lead a healthy lifestyle. They have hired a Russian based advertising company to launch and develop an advertising campaign at target markets.

1. Specify the possible priority 1st year goals of such advertising campaign for this new brand "Amilk" (possible indicators are welcome)
2. Name 3 primary stages of a development of such an advertising campaign?
3. What can be the patterns of advertising healthy products?

Case 4. The Chinese auto spare parts company ordered a Russian consulting agency to develop its corporate strategy at Russian market. Based on the methods of the Boston matrix and the "product-market" matrix by Ansoff, the agency recommended a strategy of business diversification due to risks and uncertain car growth potential.

1. Specify what is the Boston matrix and the "product-market" matrix of Ansoff, and also the advantages and disadvantages of each of them
2. Give the examples and specify the risks of corporate diversification strategies in machine engineering industries?
3. Taking into account the close cooperation between Russia and China, the current global economic depression and defragmentation of international trade, should this diversification be done in the form of Greenfield FDI?

Case 5. A Russian 12storeez fashion company, which seeks to implement a new product range and quickly (within 1 year) double the sales at a specific niche of Chinese market, has ordered a marketing research agency to review the target market.

1. Specify the types of marketing research methods applicable in modern world
2. Justify the choice of specific types of marketing research when implementing the above sales goal in fashion market?
3. When the agency presented the results of their study, 12storeez commented that too little field research methods were used. Would you consider this as a proper comment? What types of field research of the fashion market could be done quickly enough?

Case 6. Many experts consider the current situation in the global economy to be turbulent and capable of causing drastic changes for many companies. WTO and IMF are pointing out the rise of defragmentation of international trade. What does this mean for international marketing of transnational companies, for example, Unilever?

1. Explain the international marketing macro environment for a transnational company
2. Which of the macro environment elements change most rapidly and unpredictably today, and why?
3. In case of Unilever with many factories around the world, what would be the impact of current changes in international marketing environment bring to their marketing patterns and business structure?

Case 7. One of the important trends in the modern economy is a great attention to environmental protection, the so-called "green marketing". What opportunities and risks does this create for Russian food companies?

1. What are the main examples of "green marketing"?
2. What adjustments do food companies make to their product strategy, promotion strategy, and branding, when switching to "green"?
3. What could be your recommendations for rebranding to a Russian company Slavyanka aiming to sell chocolate sweets products abroad aiming to utilize "green marketing" trends.

Case 8. A Russian company has created a unique superhard material and entered the Chinese market with a new generation of metal cutting tools. It meets the demand for cutting of hard structural materials and also utilizes the trend for high-performance machining of parts. On the Chinese market the product turned out to be quite competitive: in terms of technical parameters the cutting inserts made of innovative composite significantly surpassed their Western analogs, and in terms of price they were cheaper. However, it also turned out that there are few industrial areas with the need of a monolithic tool that can work in harsh conditions and cut very deep. But there are far more areas where you also need to cut fast, but only cut a fraction of a millimeter." The company also plans to further expand geographically.

1. Given the complexity of the product, what seems to be the more logical way to enter the Southeast Asian markets?
2. What needs to be done to ensure technological leadership going forward?
3. Should the company expand its product line for smaller cutting, or should it focus on its traditional specialization (what determines this decision)?

Case 9. Natura Siberica is an actively developing Russian cosmetics company with more than 70 stores in Russia. The products are free of parabens, synthetic colors and fragrances, sulfates, silicones and petroleum products, and the company offers an optimal price in the segment of organic cosmetics. The eco-trend is currently very popular in Russia and the company is considered to be the first such domestic brand. Natura Siberica plans to enter India, where this market is growing due to the growing awareness of personal care and increasing variety of choices. Despite major competitors such as Unilever and P&G, Natura Siberica's key competitor will be Dabur, which is India's largest Ayurvedic medical company producing natural consumer products.

1. What are the main instruments for competition landscape analysis?
2. Explain the possible competitive advantages that Natura Siberica can focus and rely on in India, taking into the account the Dabur specialization?
3. What are the marketing features of India as a Bottom-of-the-Pyramid market?

2). Methodological recommendations for writing a review of the supervisor of the bachelor's and master's final qualifying work in the field of training "Management"

The review of the supervisor of the bachelor's or master's final qualifying work (master's thesis) is written in any form, however, it must necessarily contain a title and three main parts:

1. Characteristics of the student's business and professional qualities demonstrated in the process of working on the topic of the final qualifying work, as well as assessment of the development of their competencies in accordance with the OS in the RUDN.
2. General characteristics of the final qualifying work.
3. The conclusion containing the general conclusion about the possibility of admission of the student to the defense of the final qualifying work.

The title indicates the surname, first name and patronymic of the student, the group number, the topic of the final qualifying work (master's thesis).

In the first part of the review, it is advisable:

☐ to give a general description of the professional and personal qualities of the student, as well as his attitude to the process of preparing the final qualifying work (attitude to academic duties, conscientiousness, scientific responsibility, discipline, organization, analytical abilities, timeliness and quality of the implementation of the work plan on the GQW, recommendations and instructions of the supervisor, etc.);

☐ to assess the degree of independence of the student during the research, completeness and timeliness of the assignment;

to characterize the student's ability to formulate and set research goals and objectives when performing the final qualifying work;

to evaluate the ability to analyze scientific literature, noting the volume of various sources that the student studied while working on the topic of the GQW; the ability and skills to interpret statistical data and formulate practical recommendations based on the results of the study;

to assess the student's level of knowledge of modern research methods and the ability to use them in the performance of work;

to characterize the student's ability to use theoretical knowledge to analyze the problems of management practice;

give information about the student's publications, his participation in scientific-theoretical and scientific-practical conferences, about awards and incentives received by the student during his studies (if any).

In the second part of the review, it is recommended to evaluate the text of the work, paying attention to such issues as:

☐ relevance and importance of the topic of the final qualifying work, justification of its choice by the student;

validity and reliability of the provisions, conclusions and recommendations formulated in the work;

☐ the depth and completeness of the disclosure of the topic of the work, the completeness of the study;

☐ practical value and significance of conclusions and recommendations.

In the final part of the review, the supervisor should:

☐ give your opinion on whether the work meets the requirements of the OS in the RUDN;

to characterize the level of professional training of a student, assessing how well he has formed general cultural, general professional and professional competencies;

to give a conclusion on whether a student can be admitted to the defense of the final qualifying work.

The recommended volume of the review is 1.5 – 2 pages with a font of 14 and a line spacing of 1.5.

The program is compiled in accordance with the requirements of the OS in the RUDN.
